

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

When a plurality of types of biopolymers on a biochip is to be measured using a fluorescence or colorimetric means, the image of the above biochip is obtained by measuring a plurality of images while moving the above biochip step-wise by an integer multiple of the field-of-view of a one-dimensional or two-dimensional array detector on the sample, then by combining the above-described plurality of images.